Technology in the Workplace: Managing the “Kids in the Candy Store”

We live in a time where technology advances more quickly than our ability to implement policies regarding its use. Many organizations have locked down an employee's access to anything not directly related to their work. While some workplaces are far more open. This workshop will address the sorts of issues managers must be aware of when dealing with employees who use technology. We will discuss:

- The use and misuse of technology.
- Our tendency to overuse technology.
- People who use technology as a weapon or for revenge.
- Ethical issues employers should consider regarding technology.
- Coaching and mentoring to maximize employees technical know how and their ability to choose the appropriate technology for the task.
